Hello Everyone!

Hope everyone had a good month. There hasn't been a whole lot going on, but we did go on a cruise the last part of the month. Other than that, we are going to Ann's house on the first for a wonderful dinner. Also, things are starting back up for car shows and cars and coffee. By the way, Cars and Coffee has moved to a new location. It's now going to be located at WSU Braeburn Square. Don't forget we are at Braum's on Seneca every Saturday night at 7:00 PM.

Oh yeah, I almost forgot the Oil Change will be at Hank and Sharon's house next Saturday, April 8, 2023.

Just bring what you need to do the job; and, of course, your car.

Be Safe and Well.

ANNE'S TABLE ~

Anne extended another invitation to the British Car Club of Wichita, Ks, to share a homemade family-style dinner at her farm on April 1, 2023. It was a first-come and first-served reservation event to a donation-only meal that Anne does on her own as part of her fundraising efforts for community projects.

We gathered at the old Pizza Hut location at the north end of the city of Maize and caravanned to Anne's farm by way of K-96.

There is a very relaxing family feeling to this dinner that offers a valuable opportunity to learn about Amish farm and community life from two of the residents at their dinner table. Our thanks for their generosity!

IN THE REAR VIEW MIRROR

March was quiet, except for all the wrenching and flying sparks in Hank's Garage. Blackwell finally got some Apple Hydraulic Shocks for his aging 1973 MGB. It took a variety of tools and a loooong session with Hank's grinder to remove the old and install the new. This was NOT a simple change-out.

Hydraulic Shocks: Apple Hydraulics has replacements for the various years of MG & GT Hydraulic Shocks in original configurations. If your MGB or MGB GT is 1963 to 1980, a PAIR of Armstrong Lever Shocks is $295 - Apple did NOT charge me a core deposit of $50 -and shipping was $23.90. Items came oiled & ready to install and fit perfectly. But, when I showed them to Hank he could see ahead the trouble we'd have removing the Links from the shocks....RUST.

LINK or pivot arm is exposed to weather, age, and road sludge, causing the captive nut inside the little black plastic bulb to become frozen to the threads. Hank predicted frozen links, so I went back to the Internet and ordered correct shock links from Moss Motors. I ordered "2 Link, Shock Absorber", & selected the NEW design configuration, which fit perfectly (after Rod figured out which end was up.) SET: 2 Links: $53.98, $12.99 to ship: $71.99 total. Naturally, the link location was less than desirable for using a hand-held grinder, so Hank got to throw sparks around the garage with pauses for getting strength back in his arm. If you are sending the shocks back, you still have to loosen & remove the link from the shock itself. More rust to defeat! Hank just cut off enough to stuff the shock into the box.

Rebound Straps: Most now are simple sewn nylon straps (a whole new cottage industry probably grew up around the need for rebound straps.) When you look at your original straps, you should note that each strap end holds a steel tube sleeve that carries the pivot bolt. When you fit a NEW strap, you may discover that the original steel sleeve tube will NOT fit into the end of the strap - new straps have only room for the pivot bolt in the end of the strap. My advice: SAVE those steel sleeves in case they can fit in the next strap replacement. (However, if you're as old as this Blackwell, at 83, you probably won't have to worry about a "next time"!!)

Please forgive this editor for not having taken photos of this sparky adventure under my MGB, and I offer two valid excuses:

1. I have few of the right tools to R&R the rear hydraulic knee joints of an MGB suspension, And,
2. I was otherwise employed as a "light chaser," alternately illuminating the work area AND blinding everybody else under the car. (No tools were abused or broken during this job.)

Buttoned up and road-tested, my MGB rides level and much steadier through bumps & slumps. The last set of rebound straps had lasted about 5 years and was of rubber material. Who knows how long the new nylon will last?

The new links in a new design configuration appear to be stronger & sturdier and easier to access and manipulate, should replaced shocks fail in future. The rust-addicted captive nuts are gone.

It was NOT as simple a job as I had thought. My most important contribution to this job was devoting a spray can of good penetrating oil WITH a long squirt needle over SEVERAL DAYS IN ADVANCE to douse all the mounting bolts & nuts with a generous stream to reduce any rust if possible. That can of penetrating oil was worth it. Keep Apple Hydraulics & Moss Motors on radar.

One car event in this area that I have enjoyed very much for the past several years is Newton Cruise Night May 5 It's on Friday May 5th this year.

If you're looking for stuff for the BCCW do, this is a lot of fun. We meet at the high school parking lot on west 12th street around 5:30 and head out for Main Street at about 6:30. It's a real blast for anyone that grew up dragging Main or Douglas as a kid. It would be great to have bunch of British cars.

Actually, we are looking for drivers that can keep the car on the track, avoid contact, and bring the car back to the pits in one piece ready for the next driver. If you turn great lap times, wonderful. But lap times come after car preservation.

7 WOMEN WHO CHANGED THE AUTOMOBILE

BY Kyle Smith 16 March 2023 HAGERTY:

The automotive industry has advanced thanks to the input of literally countless engineers, inventors, designers, and drivers. We as the end users rarely get to know who exactly came up with which systems and parts we treasure and love today. In honor of Women's History Month, we rounded up this list—a handful of the women who helped make today's cars so practical and so enjoyable. In the early days of automotive innovation, societal pressures and professional norms prevented most women from getting involved. Thankfully, most of those barriers have fallen, though their effects are still felt: Many of the early contributions of women to the auto industry either went unrecognized or unappreciated for decades. Here's to seven of them who changed the automotive world.

Florence Lawrence

Silent film star, Florence Lawrence understood

the need for unspoken communication. She also knew communication needed to happen between cars in order to not have chaos on the roads. Not only was transportation via horse and buggy fairly slow, horses' self-preservation instincts helped keep accidents to a minimum. Once road awareness was left to absent-minded humans, the need for telegraphing an intention to stop or change direction became very apparent. Lawrence was the pioneer of turn & brake signals. She designed bumper-mounted flags and a sign that read "stop" which appeared when the brake pedal was pressed. She never patented her idea, but a century later it is still critical to transportation.

June McCarroll

While driving her 1917 Ford Model T, June McCarroll swung wide around a corner and was suddenly grille-to-grille with a large truck. After taking evasive action and stuffing her Ford into the sandy ditch, a bright idea hit her: A simple stripe down the center of the road, so that drivers knew where to expect each other to be. She lobbied California legislators via a letter-writing campaign and in 1924 a law was passed that made lane delineation standard. The idea quickly caught on in the rest of the country.

Mary Anderson

US Patent Office Inventing something takes vision, but it was a lack of clear sight during a trolley ride in 1903 that prompted Mary Anderson to create the windshield wiper. She observed the driver of the streetcar repeatedly stop the vehicle, get out, and wipe the windshield in order to see where they were going. It prompted her to invent and patent a hand-operated windshield wiper. She worked to sell the patent, but there were no takers until after the patent expired. She never saw any money for what became a crucial safety feature on every car produced. She was inducted into National Inventors Hall of Fame 2011.

Margaret Wilcox

Early automobiles were highly focused on function with little attention to comfort. It was Margaret Wilcox who thought to harness the heat that came as a byproduct of an internal-combustion engine and use it to make the passenger compartment more comfortable. Her version of a heater or climate-control system has been optional or standard on cars for over a century now, and few modern drivers tolerate its absence. Wilcox also patented a machine that could wash both clothes and dishes at the same time. It didn't catch on like the car heater.

Bertha Benz decided to help her husband promote his 1870 Daimler. Bertha borrowed—some say that she stole—her husband Karl's latest invention and drove by herself the three-wheeled Patented Motor-wagen on a 110-mile round-trip from Mannheim to Pforzheim, performing her own repairs, including finding alternate fuels at pharmacies. Her trip proved the horseless carriage could get the job done, and she thus helped to lay the path for a revolution in transportation.

Stephanie Kwolek

The average car is comprised of 30,000 parts, but none are as important as the tires. In 1964, Kwolek was working in the DuPont textile lab searching for a way to reinforce radial tires. The result of her manipulation of strands of carbon-based molecules to make larger molecules (polymers) was Kevlar, which is now a staple of performance tires to reinforce the bead and circumference. Kevlar has also had a lasting impact outside the automotive world, in the construction of bulletproof vests.

Mimi Vandermolen

Fast-forward many decades from Bertha Benz, and you find women altering the landscape of design and function. Mimi Vandermolen was a part of the Ford design studio in the early 1970s but was laid off during the oil crisis. She returned to the Blue Oval in 1977 and was instrumental in creating the interior of the then-new Ford Taurus.

Her contributions are litany of things we now take for granted: ergonomic seats, rotary dials for climate control within easy reach of the driver, and a digital display that functions as the instrument cluster.

No matter what you drive today, there are aspects of its interior that can be traced to the Taurus, and to Vandermolen.

Men's ONLY Version....

"The Men's Only Edition of the Ford Explorer. " This Ford send-up is a hoot! Officials with Ford have 'introduced,' so to speak, a Men's Only Ford Explorer.

A crew put together a Ford Explorer that included NONE of the contributions of Women!

The car has NO windshield wiper, NO heater, NO turn signals, NO rearview mirror, and NO GPS. The car isn't actually for sale, but officials with the car manufacturer introduced the car as a way to mark the significant contributions that women have made to the auto industry since World War II.
